

We're On The Move

Duncan Stuart Todd, Ltd. will relocate to Boulder, Co, with a planned date of August 1. It is anticipated that the new location will offer a range of resources to position the company for future growth and service to the industry.

"During the transition we will serve our clients with a minimum of disruption," Duncan Todd says. "It would be helpful if funeral directors who are contemplating future prep room projects would get in touch with us for consultation or scheduling," he continued, "in order to manage lead times."

The DST toll-free line, 877 832 6898 and email contacts will not change: www.duncanstuarttodd.com and info@duncanstuarttodd.com.

Caring for the Embalmer in Your Prep Room

OSHA Compliance

By Gary Finch

What Embalmers should know about Formaldehyde Exposure and Cancer

Gary Finch, a respected columnist for Funeral Home and Cemetery News, specializes in funeral home safety programs through his company, KISS Compliance Network. A recent article dealt with concerns for embalmers in the prep room.

Read what he has to say about the value of an "extension arm exhaust" for preventing formaldehyde fumes from entering the respiratory system of the embalmer. You will find the entire column at www.duncanstuarttodd.com/industrypublications.

Although he is not in the business of endorsing products, Mr. Finch believes that DST's PrepArm fills the bill.

A NEW WAY TO GET TO DST WEBSITE

It's easier now to reach DST with new electronic addresses. Instead of the confusing mix of letters, just type in www.duncanstuarttodd.com, same with "info", and there you are. Not to worry, though, the old jumble of letters is still being routed right to our office.

Our Lily is musing over whether moving hearth and home prompted her mentor, Ben Franklin, to coin this phrase:

"A place for everything, everything in its place."
